

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Disclosed is a washing machine, by which a packing means for preventing water from flowing in a cabinet via a loading hole where a detergent storing assembly is loaded. The present invention includes a tub holding laundry, water, and detergent, a detergent storing 5 assembly storing the detergent and providing the detergent to the tub on washing, a cabinet having the tub installed inside wherein the detergent storing assembly is loaded on a loading hole formed at one side of the cabinet, and a packing means sealing a gap between the detergent storing assembly and the cabinet to prevent external water from flowing in the cabinet.